Award Description	We propose research that will generate a framework of open source services that can be dynamically configured to transform HER data into standards-conforming, comparable information suitable for large-scale analyses, inferencing, and integration of disparate health data. We will apply these services to phenotype recognition (disease, risk factor, eligibility, or adverse event) in medical centers and population-based settings. Finally, we will examine data quality and repair strategies with real-work evaluations of their behavior in Clinical and Translational Science Awards (CTSAs), health information exchanges (HIEs), and National Health Information Network (NHIN) connections. We have assembled a federated informatics research community committed to open- sources resources that can industrially scale to address barriers to the broad-based, facile, and ethical use of EHR data for secondary purposes. We will collaborate to create, evaluate, and refine informatics artifacts that advance the capacity to efficiently leverage EHR data to improve care, generate new knowledge, and address population needs. Our goal is to make these artifacts available to the community of secondary EHR data users, manifest as open-source tools, services, and scalable software. In addition, we have partnered with industry developers who can make these resources available with commercial deployment. We propose to assemble modular services and agents from existing open-source software to improve the utilization of EHR data for a spectrum of use-cases and focus on three themes: Normalization, Phenotypes, and Data Quality/Evaluation. Our six projects span one or more of these themes, though together constitute a coherent ensemble of related research and development. Finally, these services will have open-source deployments as well as commercially supported implementations. There are six strongly intertwined, mutually dependent projects, including: 1) Semantic and Syntactic Normalization 2) Natural Language Processing (NLP) 3) Phenotype Applications 4) Performance Optimization 5) Data Quality Metrics 6) Evaluation Frameworks. The first two projects align with our Data Normalization theme, with Phenotype Applications and Performance Optimization span themes 1 and 2 (Normalization and Phenotyping); while the

Quarterly Activities/ Project Description Sharp Area 4: Secondary Use of HER Data The SHARP Area 4 (SHARPn) cloud computing environment, also known as "the cloud" is proudly constructed by the SHARPn infrastructure team and is basically a set of virtual machine images that can be instantiated, used, and shut down for Secondary Use of EHR Data research. The software developed by SHARPn will allow researchers and clinicians to pull together very different types of healthcare data and ask questions about disease, prevention, outcomes, and care delivery. Answering these questions requires a robust, high-quality dataset which can be generated by software in the SHARPn cloud computing environment. SHARPn hosted a roundtable for cloud-deployed clinical Natural Language Processing May 22-24 in Seattle. The roundtable brought together nationally-recognized experts in information security, key stakeholders from health care and research institutions, and representatives of leading	Activity Code 1 E06.04 Activity Code 2 Activity Code 3 Activity Code 4 Activity Code 5 Activity Code 6 Activity Code 7 Activity Code 8 Activity Code 9 Activity Code 10

cloud service providers to identify legal, regulatory, technical and governance prerequisites for secure, regulatory-compliant processing of patient clinical information in externally-hosted computing environments ("the cloud"). SHARPN also ran a tracer-shot pilot of its UIMA Pipeline; sending de-id patients through its UIMA pipeline from Intermountain Healthcare and Mayo Clinic processing all of the stages of data normalization, clinical natural language processing, persisted in MySQL database and utilized a Drools based phenotyping process. The SHARP Area 4 held its face-to-face on June 30-July1. Eighty-nine experts from dozens of research institutions and the federal government attended the conference at the University of Minnesota Rochester. Areas of specialization ranged from informatics and computer science to medicine and administration.
